F-1 Visa

It allows you to enter the country as a full-time student at an accredited academic institution. You must be enrolled in a program that culminates in a degree, diploma or certificate and the school must be authorized by the U.S. government. F-1 visa can potentially allow you to work on-campus and in some cases even off campus.

M-1 Visa

If you are planning to take a vocational or nonacademic program, other than language training, then M-1 visa (vocational student) category is the visa that you must apply for, it can be extended for more than 3 years!

TalentBridge Visa Consultancy is ongoing in refining its visa programs for registered nurses, teachers, medical and radiologic technologists.

Specialty Occupations Programs

Employers in the United States are permitted to temporarily hire foreign workers in specialty occupations (e.g., IT, engineering, mathematics, physical sciences, medicine and health, and business). TalentBridge Visa Consultancy's H-1B program is here to help you navigate the complexities of the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services.

Health-care Industries

Nurse

According to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, there were roughly a decline over the number of registered nurses in the healthcare workforce. As a result of this shortage, there were a ripple effect of rising health care costs and lower quality of life across the states.

As a result of this decline, some hospitals begin to rely on the healthcare expertise of foreign nationals to fill in the shortage. Foreign recruit nurses are able to work in the U.S. healthcare industry by either the Employment-Based Immigration (see below) or the H-1B Specialty Occupations or the Temporary Worker Visa.

Medical & Radiologic Technologist

Medical and Radiologic Technologist are critical in the healthcare system. Among the duties of these professionals are test and analyze body fluids, creating reports and findings, perform a series of radiographic examinations in patients, and many more.

With the healthcare system of the United States dwindling of healthcare professionals and assistant in the country, some hospitals decided to rely on foreign nationals to fill in the role. The H-1B Specialty Occupations is the tool that helps medical and radiologic technologist get employment in the United States. As temporary worker in the country, you will have the opportunity to enjoy and learn about the state-of-the-art healthcare facilities of the United States! Making your resume more attractive to potential employers both in your home country and in the U.S.

Physical Therapist

There will be plentiful of career opportunities in the United States for foreign physical therapists with in the next ten years, and it is expected to grow by 15%, opening about 13,900 roles annually (According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics).

Consequently, this makes the profession among the most in demand and attractive roles in the health care industries, and several medical and physical treatment facilities in the country might rely on foreign professionals that are willing to work under the H-1B Specialty Occupations temporary work visa program.

Education Industries

Primary & Secondary Teacher

Paired with our J-1 teacher program, we also have a program for educators with proven years of teaching experience and relevant education. The Specialty Occupations Program for Teachers are designed to help and hire foreign teachers in the U.S. temporarily through H-1B sponsorship.

TalentBridge Visa Consultancy is ongoing in refining its visa programs for registered nurses, teachers, medical and radiologic technologists.
